A Neighborhood Develops

The 1880's ushered in a building boom, and North Broadway blossomed with homes built in the High Victorian style: Gothic, Italianate, and Queen Anne, as well as a few Shingle and Colonial Revival styles. North Broadway was and is prime real estate, but development abruptly stops about a mile from City Hall. The street dwindles to a steep narrow track that once intersected Route 9 (Maple Avenue) near the present day Saratoga Springs Middle School. Today, the street is not suitable for vehicular traffic beyond the entrance to Skidmore College.

The estate's entry gate on North Broadway was staffed by uniformed guards with instructions to admit not only the rich and famous, but also a selected few, who were fortunate enough to have been granted admission for special events. In addition, as many as 200 sightseers a day passed through the gates to while away a pleasant afternoon traversing some of the estate's scenic roadways.

Other fine estates were built by industrialists who spent summers in their elegant North Broadway "cottages". These great houses, built according to their owners' fancy, are flanked by huge lawns and lend a quiet and prosperous air to the street.

In the Beginning

The credit for Broadway's grand proportions belongs to Gideon Putnam, one of the city's most influential founders. It was according to his plan that the street was laid out north to south, 120 feet wide, and tree-lined.

When Putnam laid out Broadway (originally Broad Street) it was not designated as north or south, but with the advent of the railroad, the tracks isolated the northern end of the street from the shops and businesses in the flourishing downtown section of the village. In the 1840s, the railroad cut across the street near the current arterial (Route 50 North) and the part of the street farthest from the heart of the village began to be referred to as North Broadway.

Woodlawn Estate

The large, meticulously landscaped lots, designed to showcase the large homes, set the character of North Broadway. Carriage houses, architectural gems in their own right, sheltered fine teams, elegant carriages, and shining harnesses. Many of these former carriage houses have been remodeled to become unique and charming private residences.

Woodlawn Park, the home of Judge Henry Hilton, was a private estate encompassing 1,500 acres. Set in the woods on land now occupied by Skidmore College, it boasted twenty five miles of graveled roadways. In addition to the primary mansion, flanked by marble statuary, the estate had quarters for 28 servants, stables to accommodate 60 horses, a spacious carriage house, a dairy, and farmland for sheep, poultry, and vegetables. Other amenities included a club house, a ballroom, and a race course, complete with a grandstand where guests

Decline and Rebirth

The golden days of the late 1800s gave way to a period of decline as the city bowed under the economic chaos of the Great Depression and two World Wars. By the 1950s the city was a shadow of its former self. Fortunately, the tide turned. While some of the homes were razed, many have been restored to their former glory and several other new residences have been added. Revitalized, North Broadway is once again home to many of Saratoga's prominent families as well as the summer address for many thoroughbred racing aficionados. Its diverse architecture remains as a testament to the creativity and opulence of the infamous Gilded Age.

SECOND STREET

719	1871 Italianate Villa: Built for the Fuller family of Troy. Classified as an Italianate because of the tower. The Queen Anne roof was probably added later.
717	1884 Queen Anne: McConike House. Classical Queen Anne with elements of Georgian architecture. Abundantly ornamented with Rosette window, balcony and gables.
695	1871 Italianate: This home remains almost exactly as it was when it was built. Occupied by a variety of owners, most of whom were summer residents.

FIRST STREET

687	c. 1903 Gothic Revival: Masonic Lodge - Victorian Gothic style identified by the pointed arches. Built for Henry S. Ludlow.
659	c. 1905 Colonial Revival: Built almost entirely of brick, with a fanned gable & plantation inspired portico.
655	c. 1897 Colonial Revival: An eclectic mixture of Colonial elements, including the gambrel roof of the Dutch Colonial era, shingles reminiscent of the earlier Shingle style and window tracery evoking the Gothic Revival style. Built by W. Stone Smith of Troy.
649	c. 1856 Italianate: This is the shape of a Federal townhouse, with details showing the style changes over the years. Built in 1856 by Lewis B. Close, Saratoga Springs Postmaster. Built of reddish brick, typical of those built in the Hudson Valley; it was one of the earliest houses built on North Broadway. When the residence went to public auction in 1880, it was acquired by Orton Brown, "one of the best old-time hotel men in...the country."
639	2002 French Chateausque: Riggi House - Influenced by French Chateau and Beaux Arts styles. Breakfast tower. First floor full arch windows. The exterior is hand split, rough granite, placed in an irregular pattern with cast stone trim. Carriage house style garages for 6 cars. 21,500 square feet.

GREENFIELD AVENUE

605	1885 Queen Anne: Brackett House - The projecting gable is accented with a board-and-batten effect; the brick facade is broken by several round-topped windows decorated with a handsome floral motif. Built for Edgar Brackett, who established the Adirondack Trust Co., was president of the Saratoga Gas, Electric Light and Power Co., and served as a New York state senator.
601	1885 Queen Anne: The projecting attic gable with lower porch are in the Queen Anne style. The basic structure is of painted brick veneer, with stucco decoration in the attic gable. A porte cochère to the left is a continuation of the porch. This house was first owned by James Pardue.
595	1921 Colonial Revival: Pruyn/Petee House - Colonial Revival in the Federal style. The portico and three part window recalls houses of the 19 th century. Designed by Alfred Hopkins.
581	c. 1834 Greek Revival: One of the oldest homes on Broadway, features simple Greek elements: columns, symmetrical windows and pilasters. White was a typical color at that time.
569	1830 Greek Revival: Ames House - Built in the 1830s, then modified with a Gothic pediment light and bay in the 1880s.
563	1884 Queen Anne: Restored in 2003 receiving the NYS Preservation Award in 2004.

Street

860	c. 1920 Tudor Revival: Surrey Inn - Built in a style befitting an English country square.
856	c. 1930: Colton House, formerly "Overlook", now Skidmore.

FOURTH STREET

760	c. 1906 Colonial Revival: Hall House - Classic Colonial Revival portico with Italianate brackets, Queen Anne chimney and ornate Corinthian columns. Extensively renovated in 1994. Built by Troy shirt manufacturer, William Lord Hall.

EAST AVENUE

754	1876 Gothic: Gothic elements include the vertical direction and steeply pitched gables of the roof. Polychrome shingles in the slate, obliquely set bricks, & the barge-board ornament mimic Gothic cathedrals. Built for Charles Cooke Lester, attorney and Saratoga County Surrogate Judge.
748	1880 Victorian Gothic: The cottage style ornamentation resembles Round Lake camp-style homes, at the former Methodist Camp.
740	1884 French Renaissance: Hathorn House - Built at the same time as the Batcheller Mansion (Circular St) with the same French chateau style. Elaborate granite pediments carved from local stone. Built by Henry Hathorn, founder of Hathorn Bottling Co.
722	1887 Queen Anne: The Kilmer House - Masonry wrap-around porch designed by Henry-Hobson Richardson, designer of the State Capital Building in Albany. Setting of the 1981 film "Ghost Story".
720	1885 Shingle Style: Ellis Cottage - Includes many Queen Anne style elements and "cladding", a continuous shingle system, designed by architect R. Newton Brezee for the Ellis family, owners of the American Locomotive Works and the Ellis Steamship Line. Used in the 1981 film "Ghost Story."

SECOND STREET

718	1865 Italian Villa: Windsor B. French House - Heavy cornice w/evenly spaced brackets and lintels retains the Italian Villa style. The Colonial Revival style porch was added later.
704	1880 Queen Anne & 1970 Modern: Original home was demolished. The present home is a combination of the original Queen Anne style carriage house and a 1970s addition.
700	1965: Contemporary: Smaller but not dwarfed by other houses w/ pointed windows extending the full first story, with roof gables. Designed by architect William Cooper, built by Russell Roberts.

FIRST STREET

688	1876 Second Empire: Green Cottage - Similar to the Batcheller Mansion, the only other French Renaissance building in the city. Tall lines & peaked roof echo the style first seen in the State Capitol.
658	1872 Second Empire: The Grande House - Converted in 1918 to the current Colonial Revival style by Charles Van Deusen.

NORTH CIRCULAR STREET

632	c. 1884 Queen Anne: Noteworthy QA features include horizontal banding between windows, gable decorations and massive chimney. Once owned by the president of Saratoga Victory Spring Company.
